Halloween Story

"Room 666"

In a tiny town, in a small country, every Halloween night, a story is told in every single house. Everyone hears the same story over and over again. They all believe it is a true story and that it actually happened many, many years ago. The story goes something like this:

"Once upon a time, there was a group of many friends, 20 to say the least. They all loved Halloween and wanted to make a special event so they would celebrate it. They decided that they could play a "Hide and seek" game in an abandoned and haunted chocolate factory nearby.

On Halloween night, they all met up at the factory. Everyone had a costume on and was dressed different than the others. They secretly got in the factory from the back door. They chose who was going to be the seeker, and the rest of them ran to their hiding places. They saw a lot of spooky and scary Halloween decorations like ghosts, vampires, zombies, witches, spiders and many more. After a certain time, everyone was hidden and the seeker began seeking. It was rough for the seeker in the beginning, seeking many people on your own in a big factory at night is not easy, but slowly and surely, he started finding a lot of kids. The kids who were found, helped him seeking so they can find everyone, end the game and announce the winner of the grand Halloween prize. By midnight everyone was found, but only one kid was missing. Jack was missing. The seeker said:

- "Where is Jack? Has anyone seen him?"

One of the kids answered:

- "I only saw Jack at the beginning at game. I have no idea where he is!"

- "Me too! – said another kid.

- "I know where he is. I saw him go in the "Room 666"."-said the third kid and pointed to the door in front of them.

The kids made a decision to go and search for Jack.

All the kids went to the room. The door started squeaking as they were opening it. It was extremely dark inside. They searched for Jack, but they couldn't find him. All they found was a pool of blood and Jack's shoe. They were terrified by the sight.

- "W-W-Where is Jack?!"- a kid stuttered in disbelief." He has to be here somewhere, right?"

Everyone heard a noise from behind. They saw a shadow walking towards them. The shadow was getting bigger and bigger, scarier and scarier. The kids were scared to death, thinking they were going to get killed any second. All of a sudden, they heard a loud "boo". They turned around, and to their surprise - it was Jack. He was okay - he was just playing a trick! The kids were relieved that Jack was fine, but they were still mad at him for scaring them!

- "But seriously guys, I am sorry." -said Jack." It never meant any harm; it was just a joke!"

By that time, everyone got tired, so they said goodbye to each other and went to their homes, happy about how their evening went and the good time spent together."

THE END
